

OPEN DATA COUNCIL DESIGNATION FORM

The Open Data Council was created in January 2016 to increase public awareness and access to data and information, enhance government transparency and accountability, encourage public engagement, stimulate innovation, and promote data sharing among state organizations. Each organization should have a designee to be a member of the Open Data Council. Designee's should have a broad knowledge of the organization and be able to work with divisions within the organization to make decisions about data that is to be made available publicly or shared with other external organizations.
